

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the Strength of Shared Dreams

Through live character portrayal and video, Emmy Award winner Ron Jones, depicts how MLK's "Poor Peoples Campaign" was a turning point in intersectional advocacy. A broad cross-section of cultural groups came together to fight against poverty. Had King lived to be the face of this young movement, it would have changed the way we look at race and social issues.

Keynote Speaker
Ron Jones
Dialogues on Diversity

"I have the audacity to believe that people everywhere can have three meals a day for their bodies, education and culture for the minds and dignity, equality and freedom for their spirits."

- Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

When:

Where:

Dialogues On Diversity

www.dialoguesondiversity.com